ABOUT MDI

MDI is not your average nonprofit. Established in 1964, MDI is a pioneer in social enterprise. The more products and services we sell to our B2B customers, the more jobs we create. But sales does not cover all the things we’d like to provide to our employees. You can help.

MDI employs 485 people, over 200 of whom are people with disabilities. We provide skills training, job coaching, and personal development, helping employees reach their potential and goals.

A job at MDI can mean success and independence, sometimes for the first time in a person’s life.

At MDI, we work with people’s strengths and talent in an inclusive, positive, fast-paced environment. MDI manufactures plastic containers for the U.S.P.S., Frito Lay, Nike, and Amazon. Caribou Coffee, Lube-tech, and Andersen Windows are businesses that turn to MDI for assembly & kitting, packaging and product testing. Projects for 3M and Veterinarian Surgical Resources are done in our medical White Room.

“People treat me differently when they see the surgery scars on my head, yet I am still the same person inside. I didn’t even know a place like MDI existed. Together, we work as a team getting product out the door and that’s important to me. For my kids, they see dad is working again and thriving. The last thing I want them to think is dad had a brain injury and is unable to move beyond it. Career Skills helped me redefine my disability and focus on my new-found strengths.”

Each $1 donated to MDI produces a social return on investment (SROI) of $4.87.

— Wider Research

When a person with disabilities gets a job at MDI, their public assistance is reduced or eliminated. They begin paying taxes on wages, funding their own insurance, contributing to retirement, and spending more in sales tax.

Many benefits are intangible to express in dollars: greater self-esteem, sociability, and quality of life of employees and the positive intangible benefits spill over on the rest of society.
